deepmerge - npm Merge two objects x and y deeply, returning a new merged object with the elements from both x and y. If an element at the same key is present for both x and y, the value from y will appear in the result. Merging creates a new object, so that neither x or y is modified. Note: By default, arrays are merged by concatenating them. merge.all(arrayOfObjects, [options]) Merges any number of objects into a single result object.
